Famous Relics to be Seen on the Screen

Of the $50,000 worth of Oriental rugs used in the production of Fox Film's "Berkeley Square" coming Thursday, April 5, to the Arrowwood Theatre, more than half were obtained from the palatial Fifth Avenue home of the Vanderbilts. The studio purchased these at the time when the ancestral Cornelius Vanderbilt home in New York was being dismantled to make room for a modern office building.

Among the rugs used in this Jesse L. Lasky picture directed by Frank Lloyd is a Golden Laphan valued at $20,000. This ancient work of art took nearly 70 years to weave, with a family of four working most of the time.

Rugs are not the only antiques used in the production. True Georgian furniture of the post-Revolutionary period graces all of the interior sets of the film. One outstanding piece is a Chippendale ribbon back settee—a genuine relic of the time when furniture making was a fine art.

"Berkeley Square," which is a faithful screen dramatization of the play by John L. Halderston, co-features Leslie Howard and Heather Angel, with Valerie Taylor, Irene Browne, Alan Mowbray, Ferdinand Gottschalk and Colin Keith-Johnston in support.

Since 1883 when the late Henry Deady, father of E. W. Boevey, chairman and president of the Canadian Pacific Railway brought from Scotland three vessels equipped with sail and steam as was the regulation at that time, for service on the Great Lakes, thousands of travelers have enjoyed this delightful inland voyage from Owen Sound and more recently from Port McNicoll through the locks at Sault Ste. Marie to Port Arthur.

Rita Little tribute to the service maintained by the Canadian Pacific that for fifty years this particular mode of summer travel is still considered a necessary part of one's Canadian travel itinerary as evidenced by the large passenger lists on the S. S. Keweenaw and Astoria leaving twice weekly from Port McNicoll and on the S. S. Manitoba from Owen Sound weekly. The two former vessels have been in continuous service since 1888 and provide commodious quarters and an excellent table for those seeking quiet relaxation. Fresh lake breezes and pleasant travel companions. Both the Keweenaw and the Astoria, 4,000 ton steamers, have whom Captain McDonald on the Astoria is considered one of the best-known authorities on Great Lakes shipping. Until a few

Easter Services Well Attended

The Good Friday commemoration of the Lord's crucifixion, held at the Church of the Brethren, was a service of wonderful spiritual import to every one who was present. The intense interest of those present prevented the length of the service from becoming tiresome. Each speaker entered into the spirit of the occasion with commendable spirit and fervor. Rev. Mr. Gilbert, Pastor of the United Church, brought the service to a climax by his very excellent presentation of a well prepared address.

Easter was appropriately observed in all services. The children rendered an excellent program during the morning service. The Pastor's morning sermon dwelt on the "Power of the resurrection." The evening program was very excellent. Record attendances characterized each service.

Buffalo Hill News

Correction from last week—

Last year's Board of Officers were returned with the exception that Mr. Leonard was appointed Secretary of the U.F.A. Local in place of Mr. Miller, for reasons which were explained to the meeting, also the list of Directors of Purchasing Pools should have included the name of Mr. M. H. Ward, which was omitted by mistake.

Malcolm Taylor was in charge of the Buffalo School for four days last week, as practice teacher. The spirit of co-operation shown and contact with one who has passed with such high marks in winning his diploma cannot but be beneficial to all concerned. It is high marks such as he has made that will go a long way in assuring success in his chosen profession.

The card party and dance which was to have been held in the Sunset Valley School on April 6th has been postponed until a later date. This was on account of a dance in Mossleigh the same night.

Mr. A. E. Starling purchased a heavy team of Clyde horses last week, from Mr. V. Adair. Bert's partiality to that Scotch breed is well known—in fact, since we've thought him a little Scotch too.

The dance at Buffalo School on April 2nd was quite a success, there being a good attendance, with good music and a good time—a first essential things for a good time, which was generally acknowledged. Don't forget the next one, date to be announced later.

An Exhibition Of Childhood

London is to witness a most unique exhibition when, on April 19, will open a display of relics of "Children throughout the Ages", acclaimed as the most comprehensive portrayal of child life during the centuries ever presented to the public. The event derives significance as much from the historical value of the various exhibits, as from the purpose to which the proceeds are to be devoted. The beneficiary will be one of London's most deserving charities.

The relics to be displayed link child life with the dim remote ages of the past, the oldest exhibit being a Chinese doll said to date from 600 B.C. From that far distance down the years, the varying fancies of children, the toys which brought them pleasure, the garments they wore, the furniture which decked their nurseries and playrooms, all will be traceable in the array of exhibits from the pre-Christian era down to the end of the reign of Queen Victoria.

Queen Elizabeth's christening robe, her cap and mittens, a portrait of her as a baby (by Holbein), will be on show. A shirt worn by Charles I. as a child, two, his boyhood's brocade coat, will find prominent place in the display beside Cromwell's christening robe. Here then that historic entity which ended so tragically for the monarch is made to symbolize the transitory nature of human passions and, transformed, serves the charitable purposes of to-day. Napoleon, too, will be represented, not in a manifestation of childlike delusion but rather in evidence of that other love which great and lowly have in common, and which is, of course, as old as childhood is. The present given by the Emperor Napoleon to his infant son, the King of Rome, has been obtained as an exhibit.

Perambulators and cradles and such adjuncts of childhood that flourished in the seventeenth century, have been collected to augment the display. Children's furniture from the sixteenth to the nineteenth centuries will be shown, as well as a display of British and foreign children's clothes, hats, shoes and gloves of the same period, early games, cards and jigsaw puzzles, playbooks and lesson books. A series of rooms is being arranged to depict child scenes of bygone days with inevitable wax figures in the Madame Tussaud tradition. There will be portraits of similar fashion as Kate Greenaway scene, a Victorian Sunday, the ancient nanny and the modern nurse.

The British royal family, as usual where charity is the object, is accordingly wholehearted support to the exhibition. Queen Mary is contributing playthings of her own childhood, and toys which enthralled the young Prince of Wales, his brothers and sisters. Two gold rattles given by Queen Victoria to the Prince of Wales also have been offered, and considerable interest will attach to an exhibit of the immature efforts of the Prince and his brother, the Duke of York, as artists. It is said these efforts are just as atrocious in result and effect as any of less exalted youth.

Perhaps one of the most interesting of the relics to be exhibited, however, has no connection whatever with the childhood of the great or the near-great. It is a plover feeding bottle, believed to date back to about 1750. It was discovered in possession of a farmer who was using it to feed his lambs. Probably no more fitting place could be found for this memento of a bygone period and a long-forgotten childhood than alongside the relics of royal youth and palace playrooms. It is a striking reminder of that strange democracy of the years that, that constant symbol of the "great levellers"—childhood—meets death that as such, in these transitional days, it will be interpreted by those privileged to patronize the exhibition.

There is a slenderly mason, too, in the story recently told by one of the better known financial journals. It happened that a shabbily dressed, ostensibly poor, elderly woman entered the classic parlors of a large up-town bank in New York, and told the uniformed guard she desired to open an account. She was shown to the new account department where three officers of the bank were more intent upon the approaching lunch hour than upon new business, particularly business which came in such unassuming garb. As it happened, lunch won, and the woman was left to the manager.

After stating her mission, the old lady asked to see a statement of the bank's financial position, much to the surprise of the manager who was accustomed to having the institution's financial status taken for granted, particularly by small depositors. However, he presented the requested statement, scoured cautiously and somewhat intelligently and pertinent questions, which satisfactorily resolved, brought the intimation the lady wished to open an account. She gave her name and other necessary information, and casually, for he expected a small initial sum, he asked: "How much do you wish to deposit?"

"Thirty-one thousand dollars," replied the old lady, equally casually, as he proceeded to count out the money in bills of various denominations.

Marvels of the Human Eye

NO. 6—ASTIGMATISM

We now come to a very common defect of the eye, one little understood by the public many of whom consider it a venially inflammatory condition or disease or that it is a temporary ailment, which is not so.

The simplest explanation of Astigmatism would be to describe it as an eyeball in which one or both refractive surfaces (Lens and Cornea) are not symmetrically curved, and visualize a perfectly round ball of glass from which you cut a slice. Now the Curves of the eye should be as equally curved in all meridians as that slice of glass and when it is not, the condition is known as Astigmatism. It is usually congenital but may be acquired by a blow or result from a scar after an ulcer has healed. It is also considered probable that many cases of Astigmatism have resulted from undue pressure on the eyeball in infancy. In the past, winking the child's eyes, also by the children rubbing their eyes in the horizontal direction in the "crossing" years as it is usually in the horizontal position, and the eye is not a shape which will, as near as possible, offset or neutralize the malformation. Cornea, in the interest of good vision.

We have seen that rays of light from any object, to be seen clearly and comfortably, must focus on the Retina and to do so must pass through symmetrically curved surfaces and to do so is impossible where Astigmatism exists because the focus is a blurred line instead of a sharp point. The poor vision that would result from Astigmatism of moderate amount is often overcome by the above action of the Lens. The third motor nerve sends power to the Ciliary muscles (which control the action of the Lens) and the Lens is forced into an unnatural shape in the effort to obtain a clear brain image. But imagine, if you can, the amount of nerve energy that is used up each day for any sixteen hours daily year after year. Is it hardly wonder that people eventually break down under the strain.

Some symptoms of Astigmatism are headaches, nervousness, irritability, loss of "pep", tilting of the head to see better, muscular indigestion, chronic constipation and even St. Vitus Dance. Different individuals are differently affected. The symptoms occurring in an individual depend upon the age, temperament, physique and occupation.

Strange as it may seem the discomfort experienced as a result of Astigmatism is not at all in proportion to the amount of error. In fact it usually bears the reverse ratio as we find the better the vision the greater the eye strain where a small amount of error exists. It is estimated that normal eyes are about thirty-five per cent. of the nerve energy of a normal body. How much is used by eyes that are abnormal? Could a body remain healthy under such circumstances? You answer.

We have no more reason to expect the eyes to be perfect than the features or any other organ. Neither are they so and few eyes are without some degree of Astigmatism. A small amount can be tolerated by many without discomfort especially in outdoor occupations, but the present age of excessive close work, study, reading for pleasure, strong electric light, moving pictures and the like, all tend to manifest the defects in the human eye. It is doubtful if our forefathers had any better or worse than this generation. They lived under conditions differently, rather, and plenty of soothing green grass and trees to meet their gaze instead of the reflections from city pavements and roads, auto radiators, store windows, etc. What artificial light then used was coal oil or gas, not electricity which is charged with rays harmful to the eyes.

Am I advocating a return to the old condition of things? By no means. I am merely pointing out the evils of modern civilization. I am merely pointing out the evils of modern civilization.

It has taken quite a time for me to tell you the worst. Now comes much better news. Science has again come to our aid in the form of instruments which, in the hands of a trained optometrist, measures the amount and kind of Astigmatism and other eye defects. Also machinery for grinding special lenses which when worn by people eventually free them of the abnormal conditions with resultant normal vision, normal amount of nerve energy used for the eyes, leaving the other organs with their proper share. The unpleasant eye and bodily symptoms disappear. The eyes are more efficient and life is enjoyed in full of tomorrow.

Strange Accidents At Sea

Two Unusual Collisions

Recent strange accidents at sea, officers of the steamer Beechpark, at Saint John, gave first-hand accounts of two unusual collisions.

Capt. Engineer David Thomson was with the Volutina when that ship carried troops across the English Channel in war days. Traveling without lights, the ship proceeded at full speed over courses ordered clear by the admiralty. A stocky trawler returning from the head to sea, without lights, came on and unwittingly crossed the troopship's track.

"It was the first time an iron ship was cut in two," said Thomson. "We struck the big trawler broadside, plowed right through the hull and out the other side. From the wreckage got a fleeting glimpse of the stern half sinking."

Only five of the crew of 30 were rescued, and one died soon after. "The confused survivors wouldn't believe it. They couldn't understand why we had not foundered also."

Capt. Will Mason told how the steamer Montpark, a famous Q-boat during the war, met a strange end while under his command in 1919. A crash occurred while the Montpark was feeling its way through poor visibility one night a few days out from the Tyne mouth. Capt. Mason saw the bow of another ship protruding into his own, heard terse orders in a foreign language, and watched the unknown vessel break up into the mine.

The Montpark sinking, its crew jumped into the sea. Capt. Mason and a few seamen were rescued, but a life raft the following evening, but other members of the crew were never found and the ship which left them helpless was never identified.

Progress For Persia

Mechanization Of Old Handicraft Industries Looks Like Mistake

Now, the Shah of Persia has evolved a five-year plan. Progress is to make its debut through the mechanization of the ancient handicraft industries that have created so many delights for collectors. Great carpet and rug factories will rear their looms where patient hands have labored after the traditions and the patterns of the past.

One will be the features that made oriental-rug collecting a delight to those with incomes permitting it. No longer will variations in color tell of the exhaustion of some native dye mixture, or irregularities in pattern betray the advent of a new native wool. The dyes and chemical washes will reach their best American "Persia" match.

Indeed, progress in Persia may mean no progress at all. Who will want a genuine oriental rug if it differs not a whit from the mechanized product of the occident?

British Flight Squadron

Suggestion Is Made That A Visit To Canada Should Be Undertaken

A suggestion was made to the British House of Commons that the United Kingdom send to Canada detachments or flights of airplanes to "show the flag" in the Dominion. The planes would be sent aboard a naval aircraft carrier.

Discussion of the proposal arose during the debate on the estimates when Oliver E. Simmonds, Dudson Conservative and aircraft manufacturer, told the house Canada had never sent a squadron of British planes, although every year squadrons of machines from the United States made exhibition flights to Canadian air pageants.

Mr. Simmonds said he was in Ottawa early this year and heard how they thought the Royal Air Force would "show the flag" in Canada. He asked that the air ministry consider the matter.

Passenger Train Pooling

Expected To Effect Big Saving Under Arrangement

The passenger train pooling arranged for in the Montreal-Toronto-Ottawa-Toronto and Montreal-Gatineau services, as extended and effective from March 11, will produce a total saving of approximately 1,000,000 train miles per annum, divided about evenly between the C.N.R. and C.P.R. and on the basis of a conservative estimate will represent a saving to each company of approximately $500,000 per annum. This information was given by the House of Commons by Hon. R. J. Manion, minister of railways and canals, based on a telegram from Chief C.P.R. P. Sullivan, of the C.N.R. board of trustees.

Crusoe and Friday

(An Fictitious Parable)

The following analytical parable with unemployment in the state of primitive society, which is going the rounds, carries many valuable lessons, many of which may be applicable to present day conditions.

"Friday," said Robinson Crusoe, "I'm sorry, I fear I must lay you off."
"What do you mean, Master?"
"Why, you know, there's a big surplus of last year's crop. I don't need you to plant another this year. I've enough goatskin clothes to last me a lifetime. My house needs no repairs. I can gather the turtle eggs myself. There's an over production. When I need you I'll send for you! You needn't wait around here."

"That's all right, Master. I'll plant my own crop, build my own hut and gather all the nuts and eggs I want myself. I'll get along fine."

"Where will you do all this, Friday?"

"Here on this Island."

"This island belongs to me, you know. I can't allow you to do that when you can't pay me anything I need. I might as well own it."

"Then I'll build a canoe and fish in the ocean. You don't own that."

"That's all right, provided you don't use any of my trees for your canoe, or build it on my land or use my beach for a landing place, and do your fishing far enough away so as not to interfere with my riparian rights."

"I never thought of that, Master. I can do without a boat, though. I'll swim over to that rock and fish there and gather seagull eggs."

"No you won't Friday. The rock is mine. I own the riparian rights."

"Then what shall I do, Master?"

"That's your problem, Friday. You're a free man and you know about the rugged individualism maintained here."

"I guess I'll starve, Master. May I stay here until I do, or shall I swim beyond your riparian rights and drown or starve there?"

"I've thought of something, Friday. I don't like to carry garbage down to the shore each day. You may stay and do that. Then whatever is left of it, after my dog and cat have been fed, you may eat. You're in luck."

"Thank you, Master. That is charity."

"One thing more, Friday. This island is over-populated. Fifty per cent of the people are unemployed. We are undergoing a severe depression and there is no way that I can see to end it. No one but a Charlatan would say that he could."

"So keep a lookout and let no one land any goods of any kind. You must be protected against foreign labor. Conditions are fundamentally sound, though, and prosperity is just around the corner."—Contributed.
